IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Miss Mullan and State Senator Lukens Married.

ROMANCE BEGINS IN WEST

Miss Gertrude Bell and Miss Alice D. Shipley other Washington Brides. Army Officers and Wives Go to Europe to Witness German Maneuvers—Fete at Georgetown.

The culmination of a pretty romance was the wedding yesterday afternoon at the residence of Capt. Mullan, in Connecticut avenue, when his daughter, Miss Emma Mullan, became the bride of Mr. John Russell Lukens, one of California's State senators.

Amid a bower of pink and white peonies and wisteria blossoms against a background of palms, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward W. Buckley, assistant pastor of St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church, which the bride's family have attended for years.

Those who witnessed the ceremony were most intimate friends of the contracting parties from California, New York, and Baltimore, as well as this city. Mr. Frank Drexel Mullan, of New York, the bride's brother, escorted his sister to the drawing room, and Miss May Mullan was her only attendant. Mr. Carlton Wall, of Oakland, Cal., was best man. About 4 o'clock a group of personal friends of the bride called to say good-bye before Mr. and Mrs. Lukens start for their honeymoon trip, which may eventuate in a summer's sojourn abroad, or take them straight to their home in California, the professional engagements of Mr. Lukens having temporarily the right of way.

While the arrangements for the wedding were, by choice of the bride, as simple and as unostentatious as possible, family sentiment played a beautiful part, as the date was her mother's birthday, which in the lifetime of Mrs. Mullan was always happily observed, and the bride wore also her mother's wedding dress. This latter was a robe of real Valenciennes lace, its ivory whiteness showing to exquisite advantage over a princess slip of soft white satin and chiffon.

The bride wore a tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Miss May Mullan, the bride's sister, wore an exceptionally pretty dress of pale blue chiffon, made in princess style, and with it a very modish picture hat with blue plumes. Capt. Mullan, whose increasing infirmities did not permit him to escort his daughter, was seated near the couple during the ceremony and the informal reception which followed.

Dr. and Mrs. Musser, the latter a sister of the bridegroom, Mr. Carlton Wall, and Mrs. Bradley, all of California, were present at the wedding. The bride's traveling dress was of light gray cloth.

The bride received an array of beautiful gifts. In the collection was a superb diamond brooch from the bridegroom, another of diamonds and pearls from Miss May Mullan, a gold tie service, a family heirloom, from Capt. Mullan, the bride's father; a chest of flat silver from the bridegroom's parents; a silver salver from Countess and Countess von Dettmer, of Germany, the latter formerly Mrs. Richard Lay, of this city; a silver cake basket from Judge and Mrs. Melvin, of California; a silver fruit dish and a silver service from Mr. and Mrs. Bouvier and the Misses Bouvier, of California; and a silver dinner service from Mr. J. B. Stetson, of California.

Mrs. Lukens, who is a sister of the bridegroom, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Westinghouse, a dozen gold spoons; Mr. James Hartman, a silver service; Mr. and Mrs. Representative and Mrs. McNeill, a large case of flat silver; Mrs. George W. Childs, a set of Limoges plates; Cardinal Gibbons, an autograph portrait; Mrs. Charles B. Putnam, a silver-bound book of poems; a bowl and glasses; Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Mullan, a silver chocolate service and a silver heirloom spoon, known as the Lafayette spoon, it having been a gift from Gen. Lafayette to the bride's great-grandfather, for clashing due her father, who was a West Point graduate, but afterward resigned from the army to practice law. At that time the family lived in California, and Capt. Mullan was employed by the State in several enterprises, while his services to the State were recognized by him. A year or so ago Miss Mullan decided to collect the money if possible for her father, and went to California for that purpose. She stayed with Mrs. Eleanor Martin, who is one of the social leaders of the Pacific coast, and at her home she met Senator Lukens, who became interested in her claim against the State, and, incidentally, in the claimant.

Miss Mullan made another trip this winter to California, from which she returned April 29, bringing with her the news of her engagement to Mr. Lukens, and also the news of the successful culmination of her suit, whereby she has collected several thousand dollars for her father, who is paralyzed.

Mr. Lukens comes of a Philadelphia family, but spent most of his boyhood in Australia. Going to Oakland, Cal., he entered the University of California, from which he was graduated, and he then entered on the practice of the law. He is now in politics, having been a close personal friend of former Gov. Pardee. He was seriously injured in an automobile accident last fall, and recently returned from a trip to Japan, where he went to recuperate.

Miss Gertrude E. Bell, daughter of Mrs. Lucy A. Bell, and Mr. William E. Rowen, formerly of Des Moines, Iowa, were married last evening at 8 o'clock, the wedding being a pretty home affair, and witnessed by relatives and a few friends only. Rev. Richard R. Riedel was the officiating clergyman, and Mr. George Preston, organist at Grace Methodist Church.

oldest Church, played the wedding march and other appropriate music. The bride and bridegroom, who were unattended, entered the parlor together, and the ceremony was performed at an improvised altar in a lower where palms and ferns formed a background for huge clusters of June roses and white daisies. The wedding gown was a soft and becoming creation of white messaline satin over tulle. The bodice was fashioned with lace and tiny hand tucks, and the skirt was finished at the bottom with bias folds. In place of the wedding veil a coronet of lilies of the valley was worn, and the wedding bouquet was a cluster of white roses. An informal reception followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Rowen leaving late in the evening for an extensive wedding trip, after which they will take their abode with Mrs. Bell, at 221 Westminster street northwest.

The lawn fete of the Georgetown University Hospital began last evening, and the opening night was as successful as its most ardent supporters could have hoped. A Washington night brought many guests to gather on the lawn and meet friends. Delectable viands tickled the palates of the hungry who came for supper. The later hours were devoted to dancing by the younger people. The fete continues through Friday evening.

TWAIN MEETS SHAW

American Humorist Encounters British Dramatist.

GIVES HIM GREAT PLEASURE

Expresses Desire to Have Some One Else to Make Known His Opinions for Him—Has Many Dinner Engagements—Calls on Lord Curzon. Is Delighted with the Trip.

London, June 18.—A newspaper representative, awaiting the arrival of Mark Twain to-day, caught sight of George Bernard Shaw, and said: "You've come to meet Mark Twain?"

"No," replied Mr. Shaw, with surprise. "I've come to meet Prof. Henderson, of the University of North Carolina. He is writing my biography, and has come over here to find out something about me."

Mr. Shaw lost no opportunity of airing himself, and gave his views at great length until Mr. Clemens turned up, when Mr. Shaw introduced himself. They had a few pleasant words. Then Mr. Shaw went off.

Mark Twain was left at the mercy of the interviewers, who discovered that the humorist is most interested in the patients now so popular here, and that he intends to go to the Oxford pageant.

Mr. Twain spent the afternoon in paying calls on Lord Curzon, Ambassador and Mrs. Reid, and in receiving a host of callers himself. He has postponed his return to the United States until July 7, owing to his numerous engagements, including in addition to the reception at the Pilgrims' Club and the lord mayor's dinner a dinner of the American Society, to be held on the Fourth of July.

Mr. Clemens was delighted with the passengers he met on board the Minneapolis, and entered into the spirit of all the ship's games, and played with the children. At the ship's concert he let the passengers into a few secrets of his autobiography, dealing principally with the expurgation of his early works by Mrs. Clemens, and her constant thwarting of his efforts to introduce real, human cuss words into the stories.

Likes Shaw's Face.

The meeting with Mr. Shaw gave him great pleasure. "I like his face," he said. "I want to see more of him."

"Some one suggested that it would be nice to have Mr. Shaw answer questions on Mark Twain's views and vice versa. Another, with more acquaintance with Mr. Shaw, said the latter would want to do both, whereupon Twain spoke up, saying: "That's even better still. It makes me more anxious to meet him again. It would save me a lot of trouble if some one would give my opinions for me."

WIDTH OF NEW CATHEDRAL

Bishop Satterlee Gives Out the Correct Measurements.

Washington Edifice Will Have Area Equalled by Few Structures of the Old World.

Editor The Washington Herald: Your paper is usually so accurate, as well as readable, that I am sure you will not object to my correcting some misstatements in your issue of Saturday, June 14, regarding the Episcopal Cathedral.

Writers on cathedrals in different books are liable to make mistakes, owing to the popular and somewhat indefinite use of the term "nave," which with some loose writers comprehends the width of the nave and the aisles on different sides of it; in others, who are more accurate, it sometimes means the width of nave from center to center of columns, and in others, from one vaulting shaft to another.

Probably the most accurate measurement of the real width of the nave is the width of the vaulting of the nave roof. In the handbook of "Gothic Architecture in England," by Francis Bond, published in London in 1905, the following measurements of the span of the nave vaulting of different cathedrals is given:

Cathedral	Span
York	65 feet
Wells	50 feet
Winchester	50 feet
Exeter	48 feet
Gloucester	48 feet
Salisbury	48 feet
Canterbury	48 feet
London	48 feet
Hereford	48 feet
Bristol	48 feet
Nottingham	48 feet
Leeds	48 feet
Manchester	48 feet
Sheffield	48 feet
Cardiff	48 feet
Cardinal Gibbons	48 feet

In the architectural measurements of the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, the width of the nave from center to center of the columns is forty-five feet; the width of the nave across from one vaulting shaft to another is about thirty-nine feet. Only one English cathedral has five aisles like Washington Cathedral.

It might be added that the superficial area, reckoned in square feet, of Washington Cathedral is 63,000, and it is only equalled by York, and is much greater than that of Lincoln, Winchester, Gloucester, Ely, Westminster Abbey, Durham, Salisbury, Canterbury, and Peterborough in England; and on the continent it is about equal to that of Cologne, Florence, Bologna, Chartres, Reims, and Bourges.

HENRY Y. SATTERLEE, Bishop of Washington.

RESCUED FROM DROWNING.

Irene Davis Saved by Walter Steward and Edward Trenton.

Irene Davis, fourteen years old, of 1299 Eleventh street southeast, yesterday fell from the Anacostia bridge and was rescued from drowning by Walter Steward, of 4 Sheridan avenue, Hillside, and Edward Trenton, of 1225 Tenth street southeast. Samuel Frazier, Jr., of Anacostia, saw the child swinging herself from the bridge and gave the alarm.

The bridge at that point is but a few feet above the water. Steward and Trenton, with the assistance of several workmen, let themselves over the side of the bridge and grasped the girl before she sank. They were unable to lift her to the bridge, however, and she was taken ashore in a rowboat and sent to her home. The girl said that she was endeavoring to reach some water lilies and lost her grip, falling into the river.
